Lot many people have contributed in some way or the other at different stages of this research work. I wish to thank them all.

My supervisor, Professor P.K. Sarkar in the Department of Botany, North Bengal University is the key personality behind the whole thesis. His initial motivation created my interest in this particular field of work. Adaptation in a new university environment and carrying out research would have been impossible without his sincere support and guidance all throughout my assignment.

The Head of the Department of Botany, NBU has always favoured in different official matters, whenever needed. I am grateful to all the teachers in the department for constant encouragement and support to make me feel-at-home in the-then alien university. They have always come forward with generous help, whenever I sought for.

Proper working environment is always a very vital criterion to ensure maximum output of an earnest effort. I will ever remember my days in the microbiology laboratory and miss in the future. In the early days Sharmistha Ghosh, later on Bijoy Moktan, Arindam Roy and lately Dilip Hore were my lab colleagues. Sincere support I received from you needs special mention. I remember times with Eric van Bommel, who came all the way from the Netherlands, to share the laboratory on a short-span project work. Contribution of Satin Singha, the lab attendant will never be ignored.

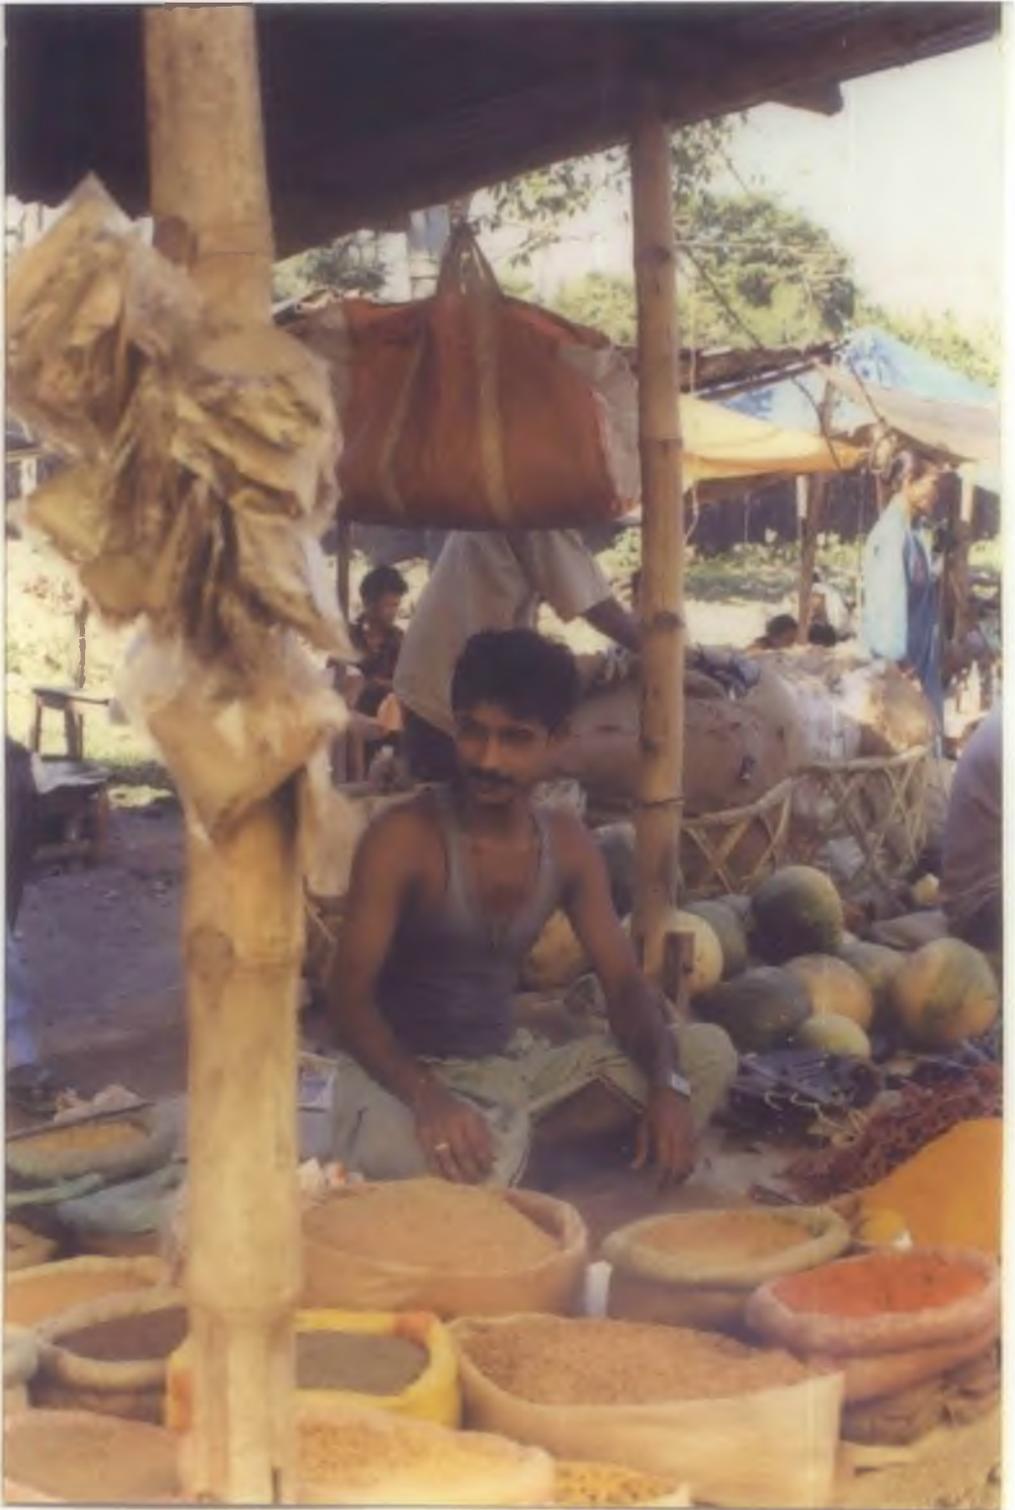

Finally, it is my family. Sujay, no word is enough for you. Your contribution can be found in so many ways what only a friend like you can do. Without you, this day of presenting the thesis would remain in my dreams only. Utsav, my son, without your heavenly smile, I would not have managed to keep the appropriate frame of mind during the tough phases of my work. I wonder how you have turned to a four-year-old boy from a baby within a blink of my eyes, the way you adjusted was really beyond my expectation.

Dear parents, you always kept helping me in your priority list, even in your busy schedule and ill health. How do I forget the blessings I received from my mother-in-law, and the encouragement I got from you, my sister and brother-in-law?
