

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A serious study is normally inspired by various people or events. The present effort is no exception. The earliest fillip came from the bishop of Darjeeling, late Eric Benjamin, when I was yet a seminarian and a teacher at St Peter's Higher Secondary School, Gayaganga. He had told me: Pastoral ministry and educational ministry are not contradictory but complementary. After completing my studies for priesthood, and as an ordained priest, I reflected on the words of my bishop and resolved to equip myself academically to carry out the educational ministry that was expected of me effectively. Keeping in view of the complementary nature of the pastoral and educational ministries, I decided on a topic related to the Holy Scriptures.

It was my brother, Fr George D'Souza, who was the Co-ordinator of the Catholic Schools in Terai (the present diocese of Bagdogra) who suggested to me the subject: Apocalyptic Literature.

Then on, many have helped me by their suggestions, encouragement, guidance, and well wishes as well as providing books. I must mention here my eldest brother, Fr Maurice D'Souza; Fr Sylvester Crasta, St Xavier's School, Pakyong; Fr Joe Kallarangatta, Scripture Professor, Morning Star College, Barrackpore; Dr Irene Pereira, AC, Principal, Carmel Teacher-Training Institute, Pakyong; Dr Regina Kottackal, FC, Resident Surgeon, Navjeevan Hospital, Gayaganga; Dr B K Banerjee, Reader in English, Dr D J Bhowmik, Head of the Department of Political Science and Dean of the Faculty of Arts, and Mr Telesphore Toppo, Department of Political Science, University of North Bengal.

I have been ably guided by my supervisor, Dr Asutosh Banerjee, former Professor of English, University of North Bengal, at every stage of my study.

To them, and all the others who may have helped me in any way, I sincerely say, "Thank you." I also thank the Almighty without whose grace and enlightenment I could not have completed my study.
