

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

If words could effectively convey the debt of gratitude that I owe to my supervisor Dr. Irshad Gulam Ahmed, Reader and Head, Department of English, Darjeeling Government College, then I should have simply done so, for he has launched me on this project, accepted my ceaseless saga of misadventures, and sustained me through trying times with the patience and sagacity of an indulgent elder. But, alas, words are worthless!

Some students owe much to their teachers whereas some teachers owe much to their students. Curiously, I can count myself among both the former group and the latter. Prof. K.K. Roy, Prof. A. Banerjee, Prof. B.K. Banerjee, Prof. U. Chakraborty, Prof. S.K. Roy Moullick, Prof. G.N. Roy, Prof. S. Samanta, late Dr. G.S. Banerjee, Dr. A. Sengupta, my teachers at the University of North Bengal, and all other eminent teachers of English with whom I have come into contact during my long years of academic noviciate have endowed me with a passion for literature and a capacity for critical thinking. Dr. C. Laha, Reader and Head, Department of English, University of North Bengal, my esteemed senior and mentor in a common pursuit of academic excellence has often given direction to my groping intellect with his love and learning. I also feel a deep sense of obligation to many distinguished teachers from diverse fields of study, including Prof. R.G. Mukherjee, formerly Vice Chancellor, University of North Bengal; Prof. P.K. Sengupta, Professor, Department of Political Science, and former Dean, the Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, University of North Bengal; Dr. S. Roy, Reader, Department of Sociology, University of North Bengal; and Dr. P.S. Das, Principal, Surya Sen Mahavidyalaya, Siliguri, for their timely assistance and wise council whenever I have approached them. My sincere thanks are due to all those who have directly or indirectly assisted me but escape my mind at this moment.

I must record my gratitude to the batches of students who have suffered my lectures on Kamala Das. However, a special mention must be made of Debaditya

Chakraborty who has continually egged me on to finish my research project at the earliest, and Mamata Sengupta who has done wonderful work with untidy manuscripts.

The test of friendship is assistance in adversity, and that, too, unconditional assistance. Oonmon Ray has stood this 'test' by proffering to me 'unconditional assistance' with his perceptive comments and enduring interest in my work.

Kamala Das, the poet at the centre of the present study, can never be adequately thanked for daring to write her poems of dream and defiance.

Any wordy appreciation will be similarly inadequate to express my real feelings for Dr. Lalita Rai Ahmed, the wife of my supervisor, and the Officer-in-charge of Darjeeling Government College, whose sisterly concern and unflinching support have been a source of great strength.

Thank I must, however, my colleagues at the Department of English, Siliguri College, Mr. S. Chakraborty, Mr. R.K. Gupta, Mr. A. Majumdar and Dr. A. Dev, and our Principal Dr. M.K. Karanjai for their constructive suggestions and co-operation at every stage of my research. I am deeply indebted to the Librarian and the staff of Siliguri College library for their courteous help and for providing congenial space. I can hardly think of a better place in which to pursue whatever truths one is capable of pursuing.

And my family! Well, what haven't they done? My parents and my elder sister who have always been there when I needed them; my wife Soma who has remained sans synonyms as my good angel; and my son little Anagh, whose uncalled-for interference in my work added relish to my pen, have all helped bring this dream of mine to the threshold of reality.
