

to my parents

because, wanting connections, we found connections - always, everywhere, and between everything.
The world exploded into a whirling network of kinships, where everything pointed to everything else, everything explained everything else ...

Umberto Eco
Foucault's Pendulum
1990: 384