

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I gratefully express my gratitude to Dr. Rangadhar Sahu who effectively motivated me to exert the efforts necessary to compile, analyze and to maintain a balanced work flow in the writing of this thesis. I am also grateful to the director, faculty members and the documentation staff at the Centre for Himalayan studies (NBU) who collectively sparked enthusiasm, and showed genuine interest in my work.

I am deeply indebted to Dr. Maitreyi Choudhury who stimulated innovative methodologies in field work and data collection, I express my deepest gratitude to Dr. Jyoti Prakash Tamang and Mrs Namrata Tamang of Sikkim Government College for giving insight in the field of ethnobotany. Dr. Ajay Rastogi and Dr. Ruchi Pant were a great motivating factor in selection of study and research material and I acknowledge the same with deepest gratitude. I am grateful to Dr. Eklavya Sharma and his team of experts at G.B. Pant Institute (Sikkim Unit) for providing insight into all environment related aspects in the area of work. I am thankful to Dr. Jyotsana Subba, Deputy Director, Bureau of Economics and Statistics, Government of Sikkim for providing me necessary data and information. I express my gratitude to Mr S.D. Lama for his help in recognition of plant species in the area of Yuksom.

My thanks are due to the lamas and monks at all the monasteries in the Upper Rangit Basin for introducing me to their respective spiritual traditions, wherein Captain Yongda of Pemayangtse monastery contributed voluntarily with a great fervour. I convey my sincere thanks to Mr Puneet Kansal, IAS, ex-SDM Ravangla, and later ADC West Sikkim in facilitating my area survey, and to his wife Amrita, for her assistance in survey of Ravangla market.

I express my deepest gratitude to Inspector General G.S. Uban, VSM and Brigadier K.N. Mehra of the Special Frontier Force for their permission and constant encouragement in completion of this thesis.

My special thanks to all officers, leaders and men of Project Archer, who generated positive attitudes during the progress of my work. Lieutenant Colonel Mani Ram Pankaj took on additional work responsibilities, sparing me time for research and study. Dafadar Clerk S.K. Mishra assisted by Paljor untiringly typed the drafts and the final script. Tashi and Kunga assisted in ground and monastic survey and in preparation of charts and maps. Sangye, my driver negotiated all the mountain roads in helping me to reach out to all possible places in the study area. Passang and Tsering provided me with hot beverages at most untimely hours by night and day. I express my deepest gratitude to each one of them.

Throughout the writing of this thesis the Sikh Regiment especially 4 SIKH and 6 SIKH were at the centre of my heart. I am grateful to the Sikh Regiment for making me worthy of taking on to writing and research related projects.

I would like to thank my wife Santosh, who was a force multiplier in keeping my enthusiasm at peak. To facilitate my work, she continued to bear the pangs of separation, and did so without a grumble. My daughter Dipti was of a great assistance in listing out bibliographical details from my collection of books and papers. My other daughters Kirti and Taru organized my work table to bring in orderliness. My sons-in-law Captain Lokesh and Lieutenant Subhash (Indian Navy) kept my morale high by cooperating with their respective wives. My grandson Rijul (Teetoo) brought in freshness with his frequent smiles.

Lastly I wish to convey my gratitude to my respected father, brothers and their families for their constant help and unflinching support. My mother who left for heavenly abode showered spiritual enthusiasm from above during the entire period, and she continues to give shade of the spiritual umbrella in the form of a tathagata.
