I am grateful to all those who helped me in selecting such an interesting topic of research and for inspiring me to complete the present dissertation. The first person to be remembered in this connection is Dr. I. Sarkar, Reader, Department of History, University of North Bengal without his direct and indirect help and guidance it would not have been possible for me to complete the work. He guided me all along and I express my gratitude to him for his valuable advice and method that I could follow in course of preparation of the thesis.

Those who specially inspired me and assisted me in various ways are Dr. Golan Kibria, Dr. Manzur Kadir, Dr. Shah Alam, Md. Delwar Hossain, Imroz Md. Shoeb, Md. Hafizur Rahman, Apex Club, Natore, Md. Bazlur Rahman, Deputy Secretary, Government of Bangladesh, Dr. Monirudzaman, Dr. Zubaida Aysha Siddika, Md. Reazaul Kadir, Deputy Secretary, Government of Bangladesh who stood by me in many occasions and circumstances which I had to face during the period of my research.

There are also Professor Moksudur Rahman, Department of Political Science, Professor Saifuddin Chaudhury, former Director of the Varendra Research Museum, Rajshahi and at present Chairman, Department of folk literature, Rajshahi University, Md. Zakaria, Md. Manirul Islam, Md. Abdus Samad, Md. Abdul Quddus and all officers and employees of the Varendra Research Museum who had not only inspired but helped me with many valuable books and documents related to my research. Their criticisms and suggestions did a lot to clarify many points under considerations. Professor Sharifuddin Ahmed, Director, National Archives, Dhaka, Bangladesh, Mr Kabirul Islam, Librarian, Asiatic Society, Dhaka, are worthy of mention for their academic advices in many occasions. Thanks are also due for the librarians and the staffs of the Rajshahi University, Rajshahi College, Rajshahi New Government College for their gesture and sympathy showed to me during the time of my collection of research materials.

Beside this, I must acknowledge the debt for the cooperation of the staff and officers of the National Library, Kolkata, The Asiatic Society, Kolkata, Library of the Bangladesh Deputy High Commission, Kolkata, Granthagar, University of North Bengal, without which the thesis would not have come to the shape as per expectation. I feel obliged to Dr. Anil Bhuiyali, Department of Economics, University of North Bengal, Professor R.R.Sanyal, the present chair person, Deptt. of History, University of North Bengal and all the teachers of Department of History namely Professor Mrs. M. Bhattacharyya (retired), Professor Chhanda Chakraborty, Dr. A.G.Ghosh, Mrs. Anita Bagchi, Mr. Kausik Banerjee and also Professor J. Kar who directly or indirectly inspired me all the time during my research period. I record my sincere thanks to Mr. Sanjay Debnath and his group of the Sanjay's Impression, Shivmandir, Darjeeling for undertaking the responsibility of printing the thesis and delivery of the same in time.

Finally, I like to express my thanks to Mrs. Fahmida Nasreen, my wife and younger brother Sk. Md. Ramizul Karim, a Ph.D. Scholar of Rajshahi University who ever shared my feelings and desires over the years of my research. My younger sons Rafiq Fahmid, Rajib Fahmid and Rashik Fahmid had always been source of inspiration for the progress of this dissertation.

May it be recorded that there may be some errors and mistakes for which the sole responsibility lies on me.
