

Acknowledgement

I am greatly indebted and grateful to Dr. Anil Bhuimali, Professor, Department of Economics, University of North Bengal under whose supervision the study was done. It was a privilege and a great advantage to have access to the wealth of his wisdom and experience. I profusely thank to the honourable teachers of the Department of Economics, University of North Bengal for their kind and necessary advices. Thanks are due to the non-teaching staff of the Department for various types of help they extended to me.

During the course of my research I took the help of different Archives and Libraries, viz. State Archives, Government of West Bengal, Kolkata, National Library, Kolkata, Centre for Studies in Social Sciences Calcutta, Kolkata, The Asiatic Society, Kolkata, Ramakrishna Mission Institute of Culture, Kolkata, Central Library, University of North Bengal, Departmental Seminary Library, N. B. U., Library of the Centre for Himalayan Studies, N. B. U., Deshbandhu District Library, Darjeeling and last but not the least the library and archives of Itihas Parikrama, a government registered research centre, Berhampore. My sincere thanks are due to the Staff and Librarians of these Archives and Libraries for their cooperation and necessary help.

I express my profound respect to Professor Ichhamuddin Sarkar, Department of History, University of North Bengal for academic help he extended to me.

I would also like to express my deepest regard to Mrs. Papri Bhuimali for her warm hospitality. My special thanks also go to Master Arumoy Bhuimali.

My gratitude and thanks are due to my father Sri Manoj Kumar Das and my husband Sri Aniruddha Das for their timely and needed advices. I am also thankful to my family for their support and care they extended to me that enabled me to finish the thesis.
