

Acknowledgement

It is desirable to acknowledge here the assistance that I have received from various people in preparing this thesis. At the outset, I express my deep sense of gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. T. B. Subba, formerly Senior Lecturer at the Centre for Himalayan Studies, North Bengal University, and now Reader in the Department of Anthropology, North Eastern Hill University, Shillong, for shaping my research imagination and constant help at every stage of my work inspite of his busy schedule.

I cannot afford to fail in recording my indebtedness to my teachers of the Centre for Himalayan Studies not only for selecting me as a Junior Research Fellow at the Centre but also sharing their wisdom and expertise without which the completion of this thesis would be difficult. I must also acknowledge my indebtedness to Professor N. C. Choudhury, former professor of the Department of Sociology & Social Anthropology, North Bengal University, for his valuable suggestions at the initial stage of my work.

I should also record my indebtedness to Bhaskar Purkayastha, S. Mahapatra, Rabin Chhetri, and K. R. Chakravorty of Sikkim Government College, and Dr. B. Kumar, the principal of Sikkim Law College for various helps. Further, Lalit Kashyap and Surindar Das, the president and secretary respectively of Sikkim Bihari Kalyan Samity, and J. D. Thirari, president of Sikkim Chamber of Commerce were very kind to render all help to me despite their engagement otherwise. Thanks are also due to the staff and students of Sikkim Government College, the local hill people and businessmen of Sikkim for their cooperation.

I do not want to miss the opportunity to extend my gratitude to Bimal K. Bhattacharya and Miss S. Misra of North Bengal University and my colleagues at the Centre for their constant inspiration to complete my research work. Further, I should like to express my thanks to J. M. Majumdar and Dr.D.P. Boot besides Harinath Poddar of my Centre for their various helps. For typing the manuscript, John S. Rai is kindly remembered.

Finally, I express my sincere gratitude to my father for his constant inspiration and encouragement.
