

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis would not have been possible without the guidance and the help of several individuals who in one way or another contributed and extended their valuable assistance in the preparation and completion of this study. I would like to express my deep and sincere gratitude to my supervisor, Professor Sanchari Roy Mukherjee, present Head of the Department of Economics, University of North Bengal. She has been incredibly generous not only with her guidance and counsel, but also with her faith and confidence in me. Her wide knowledge and her logical way of thinking have been of great value for me. She has been a true mentor throughout the entire process of writing the thesis. I am fortunate to have been under her guidance.

I want to thank Professor Jeta Sankrityayana, Dean Faculty of Arts, Commerce & Law, University of North Bengal, for his help in shaping this thesis from start to finish and for the numerous hours he invested in reading its earliest materialisations. His deep insights and enquiries were invaluable to my learning, both as a researcher and as a person. I am indebted to him because without his constant support, I would not have attained this moment in my life.

I am also thankful to Professor Anil Bhumali, Professor Kanak Kanti Bagchi, Smt. Sudakshina Dutta and Shri Govinda Chowdhury for providing continuous intellectual stimulation at the Department of Economics of North Bengal.

I am also indebted to Professor Shankar Bhowmik, University of Calcutta, who provided enormous support on several occasions, especially with respect to the econometric analyses.

I am also greatly indebted to my colleague at St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling, and elder brother Mr. Anjan Chakrabarti and his wife Prajnadi for their love, thoughtful feedback and encouragement at the final stage of the thesis. Their extensive discussions around my work and interesting explorations have been very helpful for this study.

I am deeply grateful to my friends and fellow researchers at the Department of Economics for their support and good cheer. At every stage of the thesis, the continuous probing on progress of the thesis from Johnny and Jitesh and Rajib increased my determination to complete it within the time frame. My friend Biplab deserves special thanks for helping me to compile and analyse primary dataset for the thesis.

This research benefited particularly from the support and helping attitude on the part of other Faculty members and the staff at the Department of Economics, University of North Bengal, where I spent three years as a research fellow.

I express my gratitude for the administrative and academic support I have received from my college, St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling; especially, I would like to thank Fr. Dr. K.L. George, SJ. for being supportive over the final period of submission.

I also gratefully acknowledge the cooperation and help received from the officials of University libraries particularly, North Bengal University Library and Shrimati Hansa Mehta Library of M.S University, Baroda.

Finally, I owe the greatest debt to my family, my parents, especially my mother and my elder sister, Tanusri for their unwavering belief in me and endless patience. Their love and encouragement was in the end what made this thesis possible. My love and appreciation for them, however, are infinite.

Date: 08.11.2011

Panchali Sengupta
Panchali Sengupta