The present research for this thesis was inspired by the souvenir titled 'Bharot Charo Andoloner Prekshapate Uttarbanga' edited by my supervisor Dr. Ananda Gopal Ghosh, published by the History Department, University of North Bengal, 1986. After I started the work as a part-time researcher in the Department of History, University of North Bengal, I found it an uphill task to undertake the multifaceted but challenging work. However, through my best efforts and encouragement of the departmental faculties, I trust, I could make some positive progress and contribution. Of the many challenges that have presented themselves while writing this paper, two in particular should be acknowledged. The first is economic with which political history is co-related, and secondly pattern of the political movement was inherent within regional nature and mood.

I feel immense pleasure to express my deep sense of gratitude to my generous supervisor Dr. A. G. Ghosh, Professor, Department of History, University of North Bengal, West Bengal for his valuable guidance, suggestions, keen and sustained interest, constructive criticism, an endless stream of articles and intensive encouragement and co-operation throughout my research work without which such investigation could not have taken the present shape. I am indeed grateful to the Head of the Department and faculty members of the Department of History, University of North Bengal for providing me facilities as and when needed.

In this arduous venture, I was greatly inspired by several personalities as well as authorities. I particularly want to thank the staff of the National Library (Kolkata), North Bengal University Central Library, Centre for Himalayan Studies (N.B. U) and Library of Centre for Studies in Social Science (Kolkata). My gratitude also goes to the staffs of State Archives. The present work had received valuable help rendered by the Government officials, the administrative local body and some intellectuals of North Bengal. Among them, I also express my sincere colossal gratitude to Gopal Laha and Dr. Tushar Kanti Ghosh of Malda, for providing me with necessary facilities and information to carry out the present investigation. I also gratefully acknowledge the valuable help taken from my dear friends Rajendra Majumder and Kausik Bandopadhyay.

My deepest gratitude goes to my family for their unflagging love and support throughout my life; this dissertation is simply impossible without them. They are my mother smt Dipika Chatterjee acclaimed adored and beloved wife smt Rakhi Chatterjee and my little son 'Babu'. Without their sacrifice, completion of the work could have been impossible.
