

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This Ph. D. dissertation which finally came into a reality was dedicated to my father Dhires Kumar Basu who left for the heavenly abode on the 21st December 2014 . But for his inspiration my aspiration for this doctoral study might perhaps have not been ignited in me . He was the constant guiding inspiration for me in going ahead with this Ph.d. programme. In preparing the thesis I have received unstinted help and cooperation from a long list of renowned teachers , scholars and writers to whom I have been immensely indebted. I record my special indebtedness to Dr. Manas Chakrabarty, Professor of Political Science , the University of North Bengal , who spontaneously , effectively, and efficiently guided me in the long course of the formation of concrete ideas about various topics related to my work. His supervision in the whole process of preparation of the thesis is of incalculable value to me. The major credit of giving the final shape to this dissertation goes to him. Besides, for me , he continues to be my friend, guide and philosopher.

I cannot but acknowledge valuable suggestions and guidance of Dr. Pradeep Kumar Sen Gupta , Professor of Political Science of this University , who breathed his last just one day after my pre- Ph.D. seminar which he decorated with his presence . In this seminar he appreciated my logical argument of inseparability of Directive Principles of State Policy and Fundamental Rights in the Constitution of India. It is my moral obligation to heartily thank Professor Dyutish Chakrabarty, Head of the Department of Political Science, who expedited the process of organizing the pre-Ph.D. seminar in connection with the submission of this thesis. I hold the Professors of Political Science of this University in grateful remembrance for their cooperation and support extended to me in carrying out this research work. I am heavily indebted to the Librarian of the University of North Bengal, who helped me with necessary books , journals and magazines related to my research topic. I acknowledge my indebtedness to a good many number of writers and scholars whose critical and logical opinions associated with research work have been amply reflected in my dissertation.

My colleagues of Chanchal College deserve high appreciation from the core of my heart for their scholarly suggestions and opinions as to how to develop, shape and end this mammoth work. Their cooperation has unambiguously enriched my research content. Susmita Basu , my better half , was the constant inspiration for me and extended all sorts of cooperation and helped to me in the long journey of this research work. She was always me both as a guide and bacon light. Dr. Kalyan Pandey, my unfailing friend, who wrote as many as twenty five books on English language and literature , cooperated with me as a linguistic editor of this dissertation. I shall be charged with ungratefulness if I forget to mention the name Arati Basu, my mother, whose affection and encouragement relieved me of tiredness and monotony in the course of preparation of the manuscript of the thesis.

I am no less indebted to the leading newspapers and journals published from capital cities of different states of India . These papers provided me ample information and data which I have incorporated in my thesis as authentic illustrations. I also acknowledge valuable help and cooperation of which I always availed myself from the Registrar Branch of this University. Since my research work is based mainly on social security and justice, I cannot but bow my head before Dr. Ambedkar who had crusaded against evils of social inequality prevailing in Indian society and is recorded in the socio political history of India as an unforgettable champion of social equality and justice. Apart from him , I salute Pandit Nehru , Rajendra Prasad, B.N.Rau, Allahadi Krishnaswamy Aiyer, and many other great scholars who enriched our knowledge of the basic principles and philosophy related to Directive Principles of State Policy by virtue of their scholarly analyses and interpretations.

I am finally indebted to M/S Dhar Brothers, 4 Rammohun Roy Road , Kolkata 700009 , that has beautifully designed page make- up and bound the thesis submitted to the University of North Bengal for evaluation for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Political Science.
