

Research Design

The study Indo- Soviet Relationship since Independence is a study of the relationship of the two countries covering the period 1947 to 1989. It covers all dimensions of relationship. The study has been carried out with a purpose to find out the exact nature of relationship between the two countries which has been beneficial for the both. The data which has been used for the study covers both primary and secondary sources. The techniques which has been used for the purpose of carrying out the present study is exploring the documents of foreign policy and other sources of materials. After all the data have been collected, they have been divided under different headings and analysed accordingly.

***

Data Collection.

Data for the present study have been collected from both primary and secondary sources. Primary data have been collected from foreign policy documents of the Indian foreign policy and Soviet Union's foreign policy documents and records. The secondary sources of data have been collected from the books and journals, newspapers etc.

***