

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

To begin with the section on 'Acknowledgment' I cannot deny the fact that it is difficult to put into words my gratitude and emotions.

The preparation of this thesis would not have been possible without the active support and co-operation of my supervisor, Professor Pradip Kumar Sengupta, former Dean, Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, North Bengal University. I am indebted to him for providing me every intellectual insight and valuable suggestions to understand the area of research both conceptually and operationally. His sense of humour has always given me the energy to move ahead. I also express my gratitude to 'Boudi' (wife of my supervisor) for her ever smiling affection, hospitality and generosity.

I am greatly indebted to my teachers, Department of Political Science, North Bengal University, for their support and encouragement.

My words of gratitude extend to the Principal and Staffs of Gyan Jyoti College, Siliguri, who has helped me in various ways to complete my work.

My thanks also due to the staff of the library, in particular I am indebted to Sri Ajoy Mishra, former Asstt. Librarian, NBU for his active co-operation and tireless support by providing related literature.

I am deeply indebted to the eminent authors whose work I had the privilege to quote. I am also grateful to all people of the Lime Light DTP centre who despite tremendous pressure of work computed my thesis within an unimaginable short time-frame.

I sincerely thank my family, especially my parents who have given me tremendous support and encourage me always to carry on this work.

Finally, I do not want to belittle the contribution of my husband, Debasis Chanda, by extending formal thanks to him who throughout the work helped me by looking after my necessities of daily life. He successfully shared my moments of doubt and frustration.

Last but not the least I cannot forget to embrace my daughter 'Titas' through my words for her sacrifice and co-operation. I love you baby.

The limitation, however if any, are of mine.
