

Acknowledgment

The section on 'Acknowledgment' seemed another difficult task for me, as one cannot deny the fact that it is difficult to put into words your gratitude and emotions.

This work would not have been possible without the active co-operation of my supervisor, Dr. Prof. Pradip Kumar Sengupta, former Dean, Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, North Bengal University. His constant encouragement and support has given me all the strength and courage to carry on with my research. His sense of humour has always given me the energy to move ahead and his 'hard words' (sometimes) did bring tears to my eyes which have proved to be the sparkle in my eyes today. Hats off to you, Sir! I am greatly indebted to my teachers, Department of Political Science, North Bengal University, for their support and encouragement.

My words of gratitude extend to the principal and staff of St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling, who has helped me in various ways to complete my work.

I sincerely thank my family, especially my in-laws who have given me tremendous support.

I shall be failing in my duty if I do not write about my parents, who gave me the support and the power to carry on with this work. I want to pass this message to my dad who is no more with me that I have fulfilled his dream.

My heartfelt gratitude to my husband, Rabin, for his undying support, encouragement, love and concern.

Last but not the least I cannot forget to embrace my daughter Abarna through my words for her sacrifice of staying days apart from me.

I thank all of them with a galaxy of emotions.
