

Acknowledgement

In general, it has been a ritual to acknowledge the help and assistance, a researcher receives from various sources. In my case, this is more an obligation than ritual.

I find immense pleasure to confess that I am too little to assess the leadership of Indian socialists in general and that of Jayaprakash Narayan and Dr. Rammanohar Lohia in particular. They are indeed great personalities both as socialist leaders and thinkers as well as great freedom fighters of the twentieth century. Still, I ventured. This is one way of paying homage to these great leaders.

In preparing this dissertation, I have benefited by many persons and several sources, without which, it would not have been possible for me to complete the same. At the outset, I must express my deep sense of gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. P. K. Sengupta, Professor, Department of Political Science, and Dean, Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, North Bengal University — for his constant inspiration, with his spontaneous sense of humour and his patient, methodical and scholarly guidance even in his busy schedule of the Department alongwith his additional assignments as Dean. It was his keen interest and sustained pressure, that forced me to complete the present work, and as such, the dissertation owes much to this ideal teacher, always busy with both academic and research works, alongwith administrative works of the University. His inspiration and encouragement was the main guiding force behind me.

I like to record my gratitude to Mrs. S. Sengupta, whose friendly inspiration and encouragement played an important role in completing this dissertation.

I would also like to acknowledge the inspiration and encouragement that I received from the teachers of the Department of Political Science, North Bengal University, especially, Dr. M. Yasin, Head of the Department, who requires special mentioning for his continuous inspiration and assistance in several ways in completing the dissertation.

I would also acknowledge my indebtedness to my college authority, Falakata College, Falakata, Jalpaiguri, for sanctioning me eight weeks study leave, including earned leave, as and when required for the finalization of my dissertation. I also acknowledge the cooperation and inspiration rendered by my colleagues from time to time. It would no doubt, be a fault on my part, if I don't record the inspiration and assistance of Dr. (Smt.) S. Dasgupta, Senior Lecturer in Political Science, Kalipada Ghosh Tarai Mahavidyalaya, Bagdogra, who helped me in finalizing this dissertation.

My indebtedness is also due to the staff of several Libraries, such as, the National Archives, New Delhi, Library of the I.C.S.S.R., New Delhi, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi, Library of the Jawarlal Nehru University, New Delhi, Delhi University Library, National Library, Calcutta, Gandhi Peace Foundation Library, Calcutta, and the library of the North Bengal University, for making available the needed materials with promptness and care.

No formal recognition, acknowledgement and indebtedness will match the orientation, motivation and inspiration I received from my father, who is completely bed-ridden, since last few years but constantly insisted me to complete the work, even allowing me to leave the house for a long period. I do not want to belittle the contribution of my wife, Bandana, by formally acknowledging my indebtedness to her, who herself being busy with her teaching at Alipurduar Girls' High School (XII), Alipurduar, constantly inspired me very much commensurate with her love for academic pursuits, even to the extent of undertaking all responsibilities of my sick father and our little son 'Rishi'. My sister, Sabita, also deserves special mentioning for her sincere and tireless assistance in household activities but with a never-ending smile at her face, without which, probably it would not have been possible to complete this work. I am also indebted to my Father-in-Law and Mother-in-Law, whose house is close to ours, and without hesitation they used to undertake the full responsibilities of my house upto the extent of staying there at night, during my absence for my research works. They constantly inspired me and assisted me in several ways to complete the present work.

It would be a fault on my part, if I fail to put on record the assistance I received from Kalipada Das (Kaluda) of Alipurduar, who being none of my family or relatives, extended his hands of all round cooperation, including that of financial, like an elder brother, since my post-graduate studies in the Department of Political Science, North Bengal University. He was keen to see my research completed in time.

Thanks are also due to Mr. Kalyan Deb and Babul Biswas of 'Pratilipi' for arranging the neat completion of my present dissertation by computer typing, alongwith photocopying the entire thesis within a very short time and giving me the same in bound form as it looks now. Also thanks are due to the authority and staff of the Guest House, North Bengal University, who gladly provided me with both food and lodging as and when I required. Thanks are also due to all those friends and well wishers who assisted me in different ways.

As such, this dissertation, is the result of helps and assistances received from numerous sources and in various ways. However, the limitations, if any, are exclusively mine.

Jyoti Bikash Nath
29.04.2000
(Jyoti Bikash Nath)