

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I have had the supreme fortune of having a professor of great experience, intellect and imagination as my supervisor of this dissertation. Prof. P.C. Sarkar has mastered so much of our diverse aspects of our rural economies that his theoretical acumen and attention to details of planning of the collection of data have resulted, on the one hand, in the minimisation of non-sampling errors of the data collected and, on the other hand, in the correct and reliable analysis, estimation and elaboration of prospects of the future. As for the collection and tabulation of data, my supervisor made me revise and re-work time and again till they were absolutely correct. I have no doubt that as a result of his unusual ability and attention this dissertation and some of the research papers which are being published or sent for publication will be of great use for the planning of our countryside and their men and women. My indebtedness to him is inexpressible.

Many officials at the level of Gram Panchayats and Panchayat Samities have helped me in doing the fieldwork. On my request local teachers of primary schools also unhesitatingly extended their helping hand to me. Householders who have been respondents have never been angry on my frequent revisits, which continued even at the stage of tabulation and analysis. At the initial stage, the District Agricultural Officer of Koch-Bihar and two Block Development Officers of the two Blocks, two Medical Officers of two Block Medical Offices and Hospitals have all willingly given their time to render the help sought.

Of the libraries where I got various services, the two deserve special mention. They are the Library of the University of North Bengal and the Library of Mathabhanga College. The Guptas of the Library of the University of North Bengal helped me specifically by allowing photo copy of articles and portions of books. Mr. Sunil Kumar Saha, Librarian of Mathabhanga College lent to me sufficient number of useful books. Prof. S.K. Guha, the 'Teacher-in-Charge' of Mathabhanga College, the place of my work, has always inspired me.

Some of the source maps were taken from the District Census Handbook. Some others were given by the Artist of the Office of the District Magistrate of Koch-Bihar. Dr. D.P. Boot of the Centre for Himalayan Studies of the University of North Bengal prepared some maps for me for inclusion in the dissertation.

My mother (Late Mrs. Usharani Bhowmik) encouraged me to work for Ph.D. degree. My eldest brother Mr. Sreepati Bhusan Bhowmik's help to me induced me to take up this Ph.D. Programme. Special mention may be made of Dr. Indu Bhusan Bhowmik (my second elder brother) under whose guidance a team of doctors of Peerless Hospital at Kolkata saved me from serious illness in 1998. Otherwise this dissertation would not have been completed. My brothers and sisters and their families also stood by me in all my distress.

My daughter Miss. Debapriya Biswas has always been too keen to see me a Ph.D. and has ungrudgingly borne hardships caused by my frequent absence from home.

Mr. Ajit Bhattacharya and Mrs. Ila Bhattacharya of Deshbandhupara, Siliguri gave me shelter whenever I came to my supervisor.

My colleagues and friends always encouraged me in completing this dissertation.

Mr. Mridul Goswami who typed this dissertation and his wife extended to me warm hospitality whenever I had to visit them.

I am indebted to all of them.
