

Acknowledgement

I would like to take this opportunity to convey my sincere gratitude to my Ph. D supervisor, Dr. Dahlia Bhattacharya, who has thoroughly guided my works over the years with her tireless efforts and encouragement. It is due to her constant support and readiness in help that inspires me to finally complete the dissertation. Professor Ranjan Chakrabarti has enabled me to visualize the scope and importance of this work by his valuable suggestions and advice. Whenever I was caught by any difficulties and uncertainties, he recues me from there by his everlasting blessings and affection which helps me to start with fresh ideas and new thoughts. I would like to thank my teachers namely former Professor Chhanda Chakrabarti, Professor Ratna Roy Sanyal, Professor Ananda Gopal Ghosh, Professor Ichhimuddin Sarkar, Professor Anita Bagchi, and Professor Bijoy Kumar Sarkar, Dr. Sudas Lama, Mr. Varun Kumar Roy, at the Department of History, University of North Bengal, who always allow me to get into their teachings, guidance and inspirations. I thank to the Department of History, University of North Bengal once again where I have began my research as Junior Research Fellow which has enabled me in many ways to continue my research and study during the years after my completion of Post-Graduate from that Department. I am extremely grateful to Richard Alford, Secretary of Charles Wallace India Trust (CWIT), who was kind enough to offer me a grant to visit and work in the libraries and institutions of the United Kingdom. The CWIT grant makes possible for me to go through a vast literature of archival and secondary sources stored in the British Library, the Library of Wellcome Collection, London; and the Royal Maritime Museum, Greenwich. I express my sincere gratitude to the librarians and staffs of these libraries and institutions for their extensive support, help and warmth during my work there. Professor Tirthankar Roy of London School of Economics has enriched my ideas and understandings through his expert comments and suggestions which are of great importance to my research. I also thank to the librarians, archivists and staffs of the Central Library, Centre for Himalayan Studies, and Akshay Kumar Maitreya Museum of the University of North Bengal; North Bengal State Library (Cooch Behar); and the National Library and the West Bengal State Archives, Kolkata. I am also grateful to my colleagues namely Manas Dutta, Anindya Sekhar Purakayastha, and Amitava Chatterjee for their constant encouragement and support in form of valuable books, articles and suggestions which they provided time to time according to my need for this study.

This work would not have been possible without the blessings and love of my late father, my mother and sister. I would also acknowledge my deepest gratitude to my wife who always spares me in all circumstances despite of my long absence from the family duties and responsibilities.

Nonetheless, for the error and mistakes in this work the responsibility are mine.
