

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This project which began five years back and has undergone many mutations and digressions, would not have reached its completion without the generous support of many individuals and institutions. In these long years, I have shared my views with many scholars. My debts, therefore, are too many people and I wish to take this opportunity to thank them all.

First, I would like to thank my supervisor Professor Ananda Gopal Ghosh (Guide) and Dr. Ashim Kumar Sarkar (Co-Guide) for their encouraging comments, meticulous reading, sharing their vast knowledge of history, teaching me the skills to become a good researcher. In fact, I have already published four books. The idea, however, would never have been materialized without the guidance and suggestions of Professor Ghosh. He introduced me to the intricate world of regional history and enabled me to articulate my thought in a more systematic manner.

I owe an intellectual debt to individuals in multiple locations and from different points of research. At University of North Bengal, my professors taught me to think beyond historical “facts and figures” for which I am most grateful. The assistance and interest of the librarians and staff at the National Library in Calcutta, North Bengal University Library, Malda P.G. College Library, West Bengal State Archives, West Bengal Writers Building, West Bengal Legislative Assembly, Dakshin Dinajpur Collectorate Record Office, Malda Record Office, Yukta Sangha Town Library and Dakshin Dinajpur District Library are most appreciated. They gave me ready access to the materials upon which the present study is based. I also visited Bangladesh in connection with my thesis paper. I scrutinized the Government Land Records of Rajshahi and Naoga and talked with the people of these regions who migrated after the Bangladesh War of Liberation in the year 1971.

A special word of thanks to Dr. Kamalesh Chandra Das for his invaluable assistance in the production of this thesis. Some debts, sadly, can no longer be acknowledged in person. My father would have been proud and delighted to see this thesis completed. My debts to my wife Srila are too numerous to be listed. It was she who motivated a lethargic researcher into action. The thesis would not have completed without her unflagging support, understanding and encouragement over the years. My little son Sankalan has been a constant source of pleasant and refreshing distraction that helped me to bear with the tedium of research. I would like to dedicate this thesis to my mother Sikta Ghosh.

The errors, if any have been committed involuntarily. However, the errors in fact and in judgment are, of course, my own.

University of North Bengal
Raja Rammohunpur, Darjeeling
Date: November, 2017

Samit Ghosh