

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It gives me immense pleasure to acknowledge and express my heartfelt gratitude to various individuals who have assisted me in the completion of this research study through their support, co-operation and guidance at various stages.

At the very outset I would like to thank God for blessing me and being the guiding light during the entire course of my study. I take this opportunity to express and offer my sincerest gratitude to my supervisor, Prof. Sanchari Roy Mukherjee who has played an instrumental role in guiding me in the completion of this research study. She has been a great source of inspiration and has provided invaluable advice during all stages of preparation of the thesis starting from field work to the process of writing the thesis.

I am also indebted to all the teachers of the Department of Economics, University of North Bengal, in particular Prof. Jeta Sankritayana for his invaluable inputs during the early stages of preparation, Dr. Govinda Chowdhury for his useful comments and advice during the course of the study, and Prof. K. K. Bagchi, Head, Department of Economics for his kind co-operation and support. I would also like to thank Dr. Kanchan Dutta, Prof. Sudakshina Ray, Dr. T. R. Majumdar, Shri K. Tamang and Prof. Anil Bhuijali (now Vice Chancellor, Raiganj University) and all the other teachers who have contributed in one way or the other in the completion of this research study. I would also like to thank the office staff of the Department of Economics, University of North Bengal for their support and co-operation at various times. Useful comments and suggestions provided to me by my seniors, juniors and the research scholars of the department have helped enrich my research study for which I express my thankfulness.

I would also like to extend my gratitude to the staff of the Library of the University of North Bengal which I have visited several times during the course of the study, for their co-operation.

It would have been impossible to bring this research study to fruition, had it not been for the assistance and co-operation which I have received from the staff of Kurseong College. In this regard I would like to thank the Principal of Kurseong College, Dr. Samir Bal for supporting, encouraging and guiding me especially during the final stages of preparation of the thesis.

I would also like to thank all the women respondents and their family members who have patiently provided responses to my queries and the necessary information during the field survey. I am also highly grateful to all the government officials for providing me with relevant information and data.

A special word of thanks to Mr. Angad Thapa, Mr. Sishir Rai, Mr. Kewal Rai, Mr. Sailesh Chettri, Ms. Binita Rai, Mr. Pankaj Kumar, Mr. Miraj Lepcha, Mr. Daya Ram Sharma and Mr. Umesh Lama without whose assistance this research study would not have seen the light of day.

Last but not the least I want to thank my family and friends for their unrelenting support, love, patience and encouragement that they have given me during the entire process of the research study-my parents, my parents-in-law, my sister Aroma, my better half Sunil, my son Samarth, my sister-in-law Nisha and my friends Shera, Neelee, Arati and Kiran.
