

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My interest on traditional fermented foods was first stimulated and inspired by Dr P.K. Sarkar, Ph.D., Senior Lecturer in Botany, University of North Bengal, at the time when he was in Darjeeling and was excited to find several indigenous fermented foods selling in the markets. I record my sincere gratitude to Dr Sarkar for his generous guidance, constant encouragement, and for providing me with necessary laboratory facilities during the entire course of this investigation.

I am thankful to the Principal, Sikkim Government College, Gangtok for granting me leave for the completion of my thesis.

I am much obliged to Dr A.K. Banerjee, Professor of Botany, Burdwan University and Dr C.W. Hesseltine of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Peoria, Illinois for inspiration and valuable suggestions. I extend my gratitude to Dr M.Th. Smith of CBS, Yeast Division, Delft for confirming the identification of our yeast isolates from kinema; So do I to Dr A.P. Das, Lecturer in Botany, University of North Bengal, for checking the nomenclature of the plants. I am grateful to Prof. K.B. Datta, Prof. P.K. Basu, Dr B.N. Chakraborty and Dr U. Chakraborty of the Department of Botany, University of North Bengal for their generous help whenever I needed.

I owe my thanks to Mr B.S. Thapa of Kalimpong, Mr R.P. Poudal and Dr R. Tulku of Sikkim Governement College, and also to my mother Mrs Prava Tamang for providing me with many valuable information on the traditional food fermentations.

I thankfully acknowledge the help I obtained from Mr B.K. Saha, Mr P.K. Pal and Sk A. Hossain, my lab-mates in the University of North Bengal, and Dr J.K. Sharma, Dr R. Chettri, Ms S. Tamang, Dr C.B. Sunwar and Dr A.R. Ghosh, my colleagues in Sikkim Government College. For collection of samples or for accompanying me in several field trips, I thank Mr Lalit, Mr Sudhan Pradhan, Mr Bimal Rai and Mr Mani Gurung. Special thanks are due to Mr M. Dutta for preparing the line drawings.

I gratefully acknowledge the financial assistance that I received from time to time from the Hill Affairs Branch Secretariat, Government of West Bengal, the University Grants Commission, New Delhi, and the Sikkim Science Society, Gangtok which enabled me in carrying out this work.

Finally, I must mention that I am privileged by the constant encouragement and support showered by my family members.

June 22, 1992

Jyoti Prakash Tamang