The present thesis embodies research investigations carried out by the author in the Department of Chemistry, University of North Bengal, Darjeeling, West Bengal, India.

The author expresses her profound sense of gratitude to Professor A.K. Ghosh, M.Sc., D.Phil, University of North Bengal, for his constant and inspiring guidance and supervision throughout the course of the investigations.

On this occasion, the author likes to record her deep appreciations for some helpful discussions by Prof. U.R. Ghatak, Director, Indian Association for the Cultivation of Sciences, Jadavpur, Calcutta-700032 and Prof. Amalendu Banerjee, Chemistry Department, Jadavpur University, Jadavpur, Calcutta-700032.

Thanks are due to Dr. S.N. Basu, Reader in Chemistry, North Bengal University, Dr. Basudev Basu, Lecturer in Chemistry, University of North Bengal and to Mr. Abul Hassan, Lecturer in Chemistry, Malda College, Malda, for useful discussions and interpretations of some of the NMR spectra.

Thanks are also due to Dr. Barun Kanti Deb, a senior worker of this laboratory for various help rendered during the investigations.

The author is highly grateful to a number of distinguished scientists for the help in recording the NMR and Mass spectra. Among them, mention must be made for Dr. Edvards Liepinish, Institute of Organic Synthesis, Aizkraukles 21, Riga, U.S.S.R., Dr. J. Greenslade, Department of Chemistry and Biological Chemistry, University of Essex, Colchester, U.K., Dr. S.K. Saha, Senior Lecturer, University of North Bengal and Dr. D.A. Bravo-Zhivotovskii, Institute of Organic Chemistry, Irkutsk, U.S.S.R.

Thanks are also due to the Director, Central Drug Research Institute, Lucknow for elemental analyses and recording some of ^1H NMR spectra.

The author expresses her thanks to the Head of the Department of Chemistry and authorities of the University of North Bengal for providing laboratory facilities, University Grants Commission for granting her Teacher Fellowship under Faculty Improvement Programme and authorities of the Siliguri College for sanctioning leave under FIP scheme.

The author is also thankful to her colleagues, friends and family members for help and inspiration.
