

Acknowledgement

I would like to acknowledge my thankfulness to the authorities of North Bengal University for their kind permission to work on this thesis in the University Department of Economics.

Individual acknowledgement of my intellectual indebtedness to various authors who have made a seminal contribution to the development of growth economics and fiscal policy in developing economies is difficult. Their books are listed in Bibliography.

I am most grateful to Senior Professor Dhires Bhattacharya for his review of the overall scheme of the thesis; and for kindly perusing the chapter on Fiscal Policy Reforms. His valuable suggestions have enriched the thesis.

I am greatly indebted to my supervisors (1) Dr. Jagadish Chandra Debnath, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, Professor of Economics, North Bengal University and (2) Dr. Raj Kumar Sen, Senior Faculty Member, Department of Economics, Rabindra Bharati University and Secretary and Treasurer Indian Economic Association, for their most valuable advice and guidance at all stages in the preparation of the thesis.

My discussions regarding corporate reconstruction and taxation of capital gains with K. S. Mehta, Chartered Accountant, and on the contribution of technological excellence to growth with Shiv Singh Mehta, Engineer-cum-Entrepreneur, were most useful. My thanks are due to all of them.

I also benefited greatly from participating in the discussions with several eminent economists and deliberations at the International Conference organized by the Swedish School of Economics, Helsinki in conjunction with International Institute of Development Studies in mid-1995.
