

Acknowledgement

For this research work, I am most indebted to my supervisor Dr. Pabitra Kumar Roy, without whose constant and sustaining help and guidance at every stage, I would not have been able to prepare this work. In fact, I can not express in words my gratitude for what he did for me. From the psychological point of view, I am equally grateful to my mother without whose encouragement and sacrifice I could not and would not have undertaken this work.

I am also deeply indebted to my father, who stood like a strong pillar of support in all respects, throughout this work, and to my husband Debabrata, without whose constant sympathy, encouragement and cooperation, I, as a housewife, would not have been able to do this work.

My Co-Supervisor Dr. Majulika Ghosh helped me very much for the successful completion of this work for which I am highly grateful to her.

Throughout this work, I drew my inspiration from my son sweet little Rijusona whose loving face and sweet words always helped me to overcome the tedium and tiredom of this long work and provide fresh energy to me so essential for this serious type of research work.

Dr. Ratnabali Roy, my supervisor's wife also played an important role in this matter.
