

I. Acknowledgements:

During the post graduation days I used to be a stunned listener to various thought provoking lectures on financial economics delivered by our respectable teachers. Especially lectures on the market failures and efficiency theory. by Dr. HIRAK ROY (Associate Professor , Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal) and Dr. MALAY K. ROY (Former Associate Professor , Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal) attracted me the most to engage myself in the research work in Behavioural finance after completion of my post graduation.

In the process of my research work, the most powerful inspiration has been my teacher and research supervisor Associate Professor Dr. HIRAK ROY. I am extremely grateful to him, Without his untiring motivations and support I would have not shown the courage of taking such a formidable task of studying behavioural implications of market upheavals on which no significant work is available in Indian context. No amount of thanks is enough to express my gratitude to him. I am ever grateful to Former Associate Professor, Dr. MALAY K. ROY who has helped, guided and motivated me at every step, starting from the selection of topic to the completion of writings with his extreme patience and energy. I must convey regards and my special indebtedness to Professor Dr. AJIT KUMAR ROY, (Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal) for extending extraordinary support in understanding various subtle issues. I am also indebted to Assistant Professor, Sri JOY SARKAR, (Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal) for his brisk and invigorating support in course of my present study by way of providing me with various research materials, books, references and even computer machineries as when required. I must not forget to mention his commendable support during the time of collecting primary and secondary data. I must convey my gratitude to all other faculty members of the Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal for extending supports and encouragements during the course of study.

I am also thankful to officials and staff of the University of North Bengal for helping me at various stages of the research work.

I would specially mention the name of some scholars, Sri AVIJIT LAHIRI, (Asst. Professor , St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling), Dr. JOYDEEP BISWAS, (Assistant Controller of Examination, University of North Bengal), Sri TAMOJIT ROY, (Asst. Professor, Coochbehar College), for extending their helps and cooperation when I needed them.

I should express my sincere gratitude to Sri RAJIB BHAUMIK (Assist. Professor, Alipurduar College) who constantly inspired me to carry on my research work.

I am also thankful to staff and officers of 'Grantha Bhavan', Central Library of the University of North Bengal, B.C.ROY Memorial Library, IIM Calcutta, National Library, Kolkata for providing various study materials that I required.

Now at this jubilant moment of submitting the thesis I remember my father Late Narayan Chandra Ghosh who departed long before at the initial stage of my academic life. But his academic commitments and ideologies have inspired me the most in my life. I am now expressing heartiest gratitude towards his soul and want to dedicate this piece of work to him. I am finding very hard to locate my words to express my gratitude towards my mother. She left no stone unturned to fight against all odds to provide me enough scope to pursue this study. I also admit the enthusiastic companionship of my elder brother and sister – in – law.

My best friend and companion in life, Jayatri, my wife has always been a constant support at every moment I face any bit of problem in the progress of present work. I express my heartiest thanks to her for sparing me always from my regular duties in my family at the excuse of doing this research work.

Finally, I must beg my forgiveness to the most precious gift in my life , my daughter Sreejita, whom I deprived a lot on the excuse of my Ph.D, wish she may go beyond the present research to give me solace.

Needless to add, any errors and omissions in the thesis is entirely my responsibility and I will be extremely grateful if they are pointed out to me.

Above all I must bow my head to the Almighty, nothing can happen in this world without His will.

-Surajit Ghosh.