

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First of all, my deep sense of gratitude is to be acknowledged to my Ph. D. Supervisor, Dr. Kanak Kanti Bagchi, Professor of Economics, Department of Economics, University of North Bengal, Darjeeling for giving me the opportunity to work with him, suggesting the research problems and supervising my research work at every stage leading to the preparation of this thesis.

While writing this thesis, I had support from various primary and secondary sources of information. I came across a number of Books, Journals, reports of Government and Non-Governmental Organizations, Seminar Papers, etc., which helped me to make the same authentic. I wish to convey my sincere thanks to various institutions that have extended their help and co-operation.

I extend my special thanks to all the faculty members of Department of Economics, University of North Bengal for their support and motivation at the right time.

I thank the Librarians of University of North Bengal, National Labour Institute, Noida, Central Library, Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), EXIM Bank Library, JNU, Ratan Tata Library, Delhi School of Economics, ICSSR, New Delhi, Gauhati University, Guwahati and Gossaigaon College, Gossaigaon.

I am grateful to the parents and working children of the sample areas in Kokrajhar district, for sparing their valuable time in providing me the necessary data for this research work. I express my thanks to the Inspectors of Labour, different districts of Assam for providing me the data on child labour.

My heartfelt thanks go to my wife "Devajani" and my family members for their constant support, cheerful encouragement and affection from the very beginning to the end of my research work. My special thanks are due to my dearest friends for all their help and support.
