ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The task of writing a Ph. D. thesis is indeed a time-taking and as well as a worthwhile venture. It gave me many new types of experiences. Sometimes, when I went through the literature of different writers it gave me new insight into the issue and hence gladdened me. Some other times I found it very painful to hear the experiences of some people whose views I tried to elicit for further insight. The sudden outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic could do two things in my life: it made me think about the meaning of life more deeply and second, on account of the lack of materials and without a hostel facility, it indeed became difficult to make any headway in my research work. Hence, it indeed took more time than I thought before.

During this voyage on more than one occasion, in moments of crisis, some people tried, in every possible way, to rescue me from my plight and agony. I need to mention their name as otherwise my soul will not remain content. One of them is the person who agreed to supervise my work—Prof. Jyotish Chandra Basak. His guidance and statements during this voyage worked like nectar in my mind and life. I find no appropriate words to convey my gratitude to him as I am scared that words may not express properly what I want to articulate. Simply I would like to say: Sir, I shall ever remain grateful to you.

My association with the Department of Philosophy, University of North Bengal, is deeply rooted. It is from here I did my M. A. Since my admission, the milieu that I got here is unthought of. When I joined this university, I had no idea about the university system. But during my days at the University, I could realise the vastness of the knowledge of my teachers and the cordial relations that they maintain with students and research scholars. It is they who groomed me with their best efforts. Hence, I must mention their names and respectfully express my gratitude to them. They are: Prof. Kantilal Das, Prof. Debika Saha, Prof. Nirmal

Kr. Roy, Prof. Koushik Joardar, Prof. Laxmikanta Padhi, Prof. Anirban Mukherjee, Smt. Anureema Bhattacharyya, Dr. Ngaleknao Ramthing, Dr. Swagata Ghosh, and Dr. Mayank Bora. It might have happened that I could not remain in touch with all of them. But their scholarship and affection were indeed sources of encouragement for me. Some teachers who taught me have retired now. I also express my indebtedness to them. I simply want to say, professors—you are the masters who shaped my life and will be shaping my future career. I shall ever remain grateful to you! I shall never forget about my Rishi rna.

Indian Council of Philosophical Research (ICPR), New Delhi, has extended a Junior Research Fellowship to me for two years. I deeply acknowledge ICPR's generous contribution and suggestions extended by the experts during my presentations of the progress report.

In addition to my supervisor, two RAC members, Prof. Debika Saha and Prof. Laxmikanta Padhi, from time to time, extended many suggestions. They were very forthcoming whenever I approached them. I humbly acknowledge their contributions.

I also want to express my gratitude to the staff of the Department, the Library, and other branches without whose help I could not have completed the work.

A home is a locale which creates an ambience for work. Without their support, encouragement, and prayers, embarking on such a project would not have been possible. I am fortunate to have such families. I, therefore, would like to convey my regards to my parents, in-laws and husband. Without their untold sacrifices, it would have been impossible for me to complete my higher studies.
