This dissertation is the outcome of a doctoral research undertaken at the University of North Bengal, Darjeeling, India. It gives me immense pleasure to place on record the great help and co-operation. I received from several persons and institutions during the preparation of this dissertation. I am already obliged to Dr. I. Sarkar, Reader in History, North Bengal University who acted as my supervisor and for his unqualified support in its planning and execution. I record my gratitude to all the teachers of the Department of History, North Bengal University whose kind help and constant encouragement made possible the completion of this research work in time. I felt honoured and complemented being in touch with a teacher like of Dr. Anil Bhuiyali, present Head of the Department of Economics, North Bengal University, whose inspiration had always been an invisible spirit to take up my venture for collecting materials through the period. I am thankful to Mr. Gholam Kibria, Head of the Department of Management, Edward College, Pabna, Bangladesh for the invaluable co-operation I received till date. I am thankful to Mr. Sha Alam, Assistant Professor of Management, and Mr. S.M. Rabiul Karim, Assistant Professor of Islamic History, both Rajshahi College for their kind help and co-operation even shown for the progress of my research. Despite their own academic and other commitments, they have responded with patience to my queries and to my claims on their time and expertise.

I am extremely indebted to the staff and authorities of the Varendra Research Museum and Library, (Rajshahi), Rajshahi College Library and Libraries of the Institute of Bangladesh Studies and Rajshahi University, (Bangladesh), for their co-operation and inspiration.

In this opportunity I remember with much gratitude the invaluable services I received from the staff of the Granthagar (Central Library) North Bengal University, National Library Kolkata, Asiatic Society, Kolkata, Asiatic Society of Bangladesh (Dhaka) and above all the National Archives of Bangladesh, Dacca. I record my sincere thanks to all them. I also extend my sincere thanks to Mr. Sanjay Debnath and his group of the Sanjay's Impression, Shantipur, Darjeeling for undertaking the responsibility of printing and delivery of the thesis in time.

Last but not the least, I must acknowledge the important role of my wife Nurunnesa whose constant encouragement was a source of inspiration to me. My two little kids Pratyay and Pratiti kept a watchful eye on my stationary needs, and their occasional disturbances, too, provided reliving diversion.

At long last, I must admit that the responsibility for errors of fact or argument, if any, remains mine alone.
