

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis would not have been completed had it not been for the support and co-operation of several individuals who have directly and indirectly contributed towards its completion. I would like to place on record my sincere gratitude to all of them.

Firstly, I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to my guide, Professor Palas R. Sengupta, Professor, Department of Commerce, University of North Bengal for guiding me to complete the thesis. Working on this thesis has had its own difficulties, stresses and strains but, without his consent, guidance and support, co-operation and understanding, this research would not have been completed. My thanks are due to the faculty members of the Commerce Department, North Bengal University for their supervision and comments during the pre-registration seminar.

I would like to thank Dr S.S. Mahapatra, Head of the Department of Commerce, Government College, Tadong, Sikkim for offering me his valuable time, suggestions and guiding me to do the needful during difficult situations.

My special thanks are also for Dr (Mrs) Indu Pandit, former Principal, Guru Nanak College of Education, Mulund, Mumbai who has been a constant source of inspiration by offering to me informational support in times of need. My thanks are due to Mr Ashish Govekar, Technical Assistant, Computer Centre, Tata Institute of Social Science, Mumbai and the librarians of the Sikkim Government College and University of Mumbai, for their prompt and obliging cooperation.

Above to all the teachers who are the subject of my investigation, the management staff of primary and secondary schools in Sikkim who extended all possible cooperation, my sincere thanks for their input and patience.

And, finally I am deeply grateful to my parents and the other members of my family for their love and support while undertaking this research.
