

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I have drawn help from numerous sources for the preparation of the thesis. The most noteworthy and significant has been the guidance and inspiration of Prof. M. Dasgupta, Department of Economics, N.B.U., my Supervisor. Prof. Dasgupta also drew my attention to a number of references relevant to the subject of the thesis and helped me out in locating them. I acknowledge Prof. Dasgupta's gracious help in the preparation of the thesis with deep sense of gratitude.

I owe a debt of gratitude to late Dr. S. Bhattacharya, Reader, Department of Commerce, N.B.U., my former supervisor who assisted me in formulating the primary idea of this thesis.

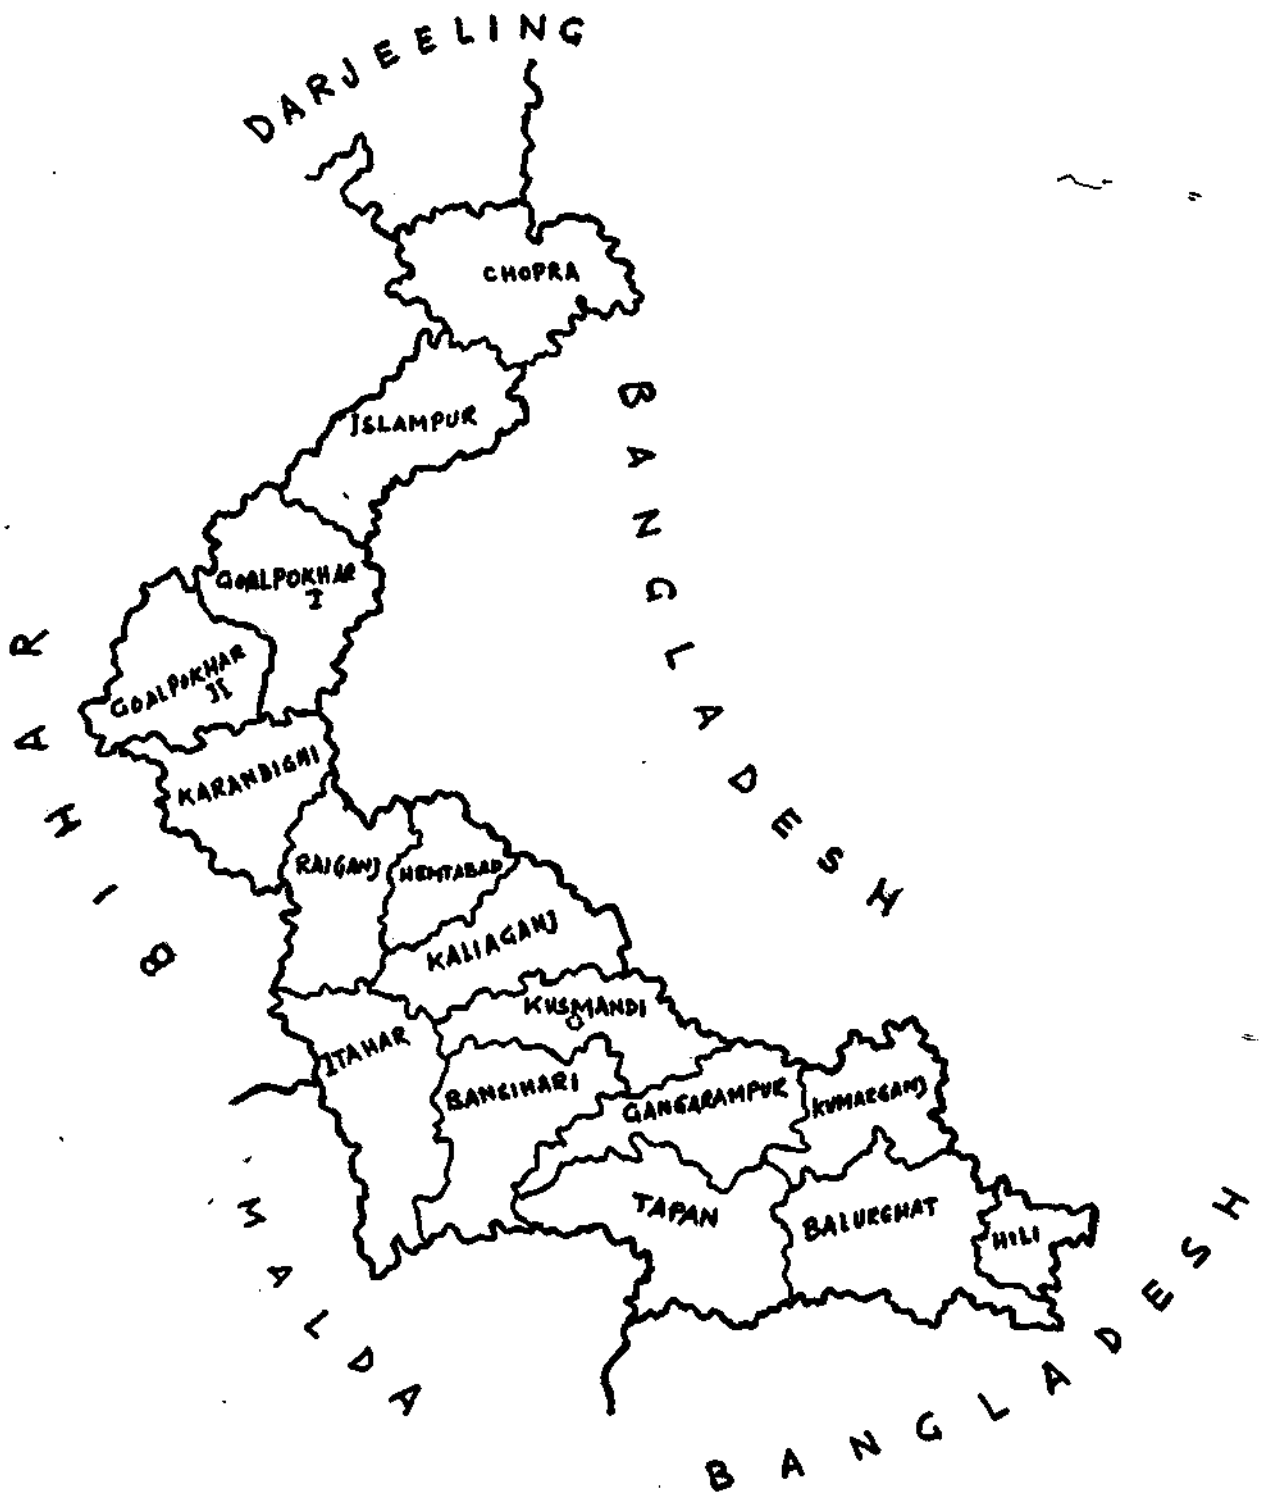

I am also particularly thankful to Prof. R.C. Sharma, former Reader of the Department of Commerce, N.B.U., Prof. A.K. Konar, former Lecturer, Department of Commerce, N.B.U. and Prof. M.K. Roy, Reader, Department of Commerce, N.B.U. for their constant encouragement.

I would also like to gratefully acknowledge the co-operation of the fisheries department, Mr. B.K. Mitra, Executive Officer, F.F.D.A., Balurghat, Mr. M.M. Mandal and Mr. B. Roy, FEO and Technical Officer, Department of Fisheries, Government of West Bengal, in providing me the required data and literature. I am also thankful to the numerous fish farmers who unhesitatingly responded to the various queries I put to them.

Though I have tried my best to mention sources of my information, I sincerely crave for the indulgence of those who might have remained unacknowledged due to oversight.
