

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I have been able to undertake this research due to the fellowship obtained as a College teacher during the period November'84 to November'87 under the Faculty Improvement Programme of the University Grants Commission, New Delhi and, therefore, I am grateful and obliged to the authorities of the U.G.C. Without this help it was not possible for me to undertake the project.

I have completed my thesis under the supervision of Dr. Tapas Kumar Roychaudhury, Professor of History and Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Commerce and Law, North Bengal University. Without his genial guidance it would not have been possible for me to complete the work. I think words are not sufficient to express my gratitude for his valuable guidance, inspiring encouragement and untiring effort at all stages of my research work. Without his kind co-operation, my thesis would not have seen the light of the day. I offer my gratitude and respect to him.

I also offer my respect and 'pranam' to my venerable teacher Dr. Benoy Bhusan Chaudhury, D. Phil.(Cal), D. Phil.(Oxon), Professor of Economic History, Calcutta University, for his kind suggestions at the time of undertaking my project.

I am grateful to the employees of North Bengal University Library, National Library, West Bengal Secretariat Library, Asiatic Society Library, Calcutta University Library, National Archives and West Bengal State Archives for their sincere co-operation and I take this opportunity to thank them all.

I owe a debt of gratitude to the Vice Chancellor, North Bengal University for allowing me to undertake the project.

I also express my gratitude to the Registrar (N.B.U.), Development Officer and employees of Registrar's Department for their co-operation in submitting my thesis.

I offer my thanks to 'PRATILIPi' for typing work. I am also thankful to Mr. Nirmal Chanda of Geography Department (N.B.U.) for drawing the maps.

I wish to express my gratitude to all those who have directly or indirectly helped me in accomplishing various tasks connected with my thesis work.

Lastly, I should thank my wife, Smt. Krishna Guha (M.A.B.T) and my son Indranil, for their co-operation, regular encouragement and tolerance needed for steady progress of my study. My wife has always encouraged me to complete the work. She deserves my hearty thanks for patience and family service through out my work.

Sujit Chandra Guha
Head of the Deptt. of History,
Dinhata College, Cooch-behar.