

Acknowledgement

My interest of conducting the research on the fundamentals of Sociology of Health and Illness in Nepal persuaded me to choose this research for my Ph.D, in Sociology. The present work would hopefully add to the literature in general Sociology in Nepal, with particular reference to health and illness.

In different stages of the present work, many individuals and organizations have extended their kind help, cooperation and suggestions.

First of all, I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude and indebtedness to Dr. Sanjay Roy, my thesis supervisor, for his constant guidance, supervision, encouragement and cooperation in formulating research proposal, collecting and analyzing data and writing of this thesis. The present shape of this thesis is because of his scrupulous supervision.

I have benefited from the constructive comments of the faculty members at the Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology in the University of North Bengal in finalizing the research proposal for which I owe a special thanks to all of them.

I am grateful to Tribhuvan University authorities for allowing me to take leave from my Central Department of Sociology/Anthropology in order to complete my Ph. D work. I would like to express my thanks to the colleagues in the department for their kind support.

No word of thanks could be enough for my beloved parents who always stood by me.

I cannot but express my heart felt thanks and indebtedness to my beloved wife Kritika, son Jyoti and daughter Jyotsna for their patience, and constant inspiration. I admire the help, patience, love and sacrifice of my wife Kritika during the course of this study.

I am greatly indebted to Mr. Krishna Sapkota for his enduring endeavour in computer work and data analysis. My sincere thanks goes to Mr. Suman Phuyal for his untiring effort in typing the draft and final version of this thesis. I would also like to record my thanks to Mr. Bijay Upadhyaya for formatting.

I gratefully remember those Banigama VDC officials of the study area who extended all possible help and cooperation during the field work. Without the help, cooperation, patience and good understanding of the inhabitants of Banigama this study would have not been possible.
