I am grateful to numerous authors in the field of active politics of both the parties, namely, the CPI and the CPI(M) and their office-bearers and persons in the field of academics whose publications I freely and extensively used for my description in this thesis.

I am highly indebted to the respondents of the interviews for this work. They have kindly volunteered their information of experience about their practical political activities and opinion. They cordially treated me as their guest while I was visiting them in the rural areas of West Bengal for the survey purpose.

Respondents have helped me immensely by offering their opinions which I have used for this thesis, but I have developed my own position on each such opinion on the basis of my own analysis. Therefore, for the positions I have taken I hold no one responsible but myself.
