

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is of great pleasure to me in expressing my deep sense of regards and profound indebtedness to Dr. Kanak Kanti Bagchi, Professor, Department of Economics, North Bengal University, Raja Rammohunpur West Bengal, who has guided me throughout this study. I shall always remember his friendly nature and deep interest he has shown in my work, without which it would not have been possible to complete this work.

I convey my sincere thanks to the authorities of National Library, Kolkata; the Library of the University of North Bengal, Raja Rammohunpur, the Library of the centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Kolkata; Library of Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata; Secretariat Library, Writers Building, Kolkata; Library of the District Collectorate of Uttar Dinajpur district, and Block Development Offices of this district.

I acknowledge the help and assistance rendered by government officials for the collection of the official data. I am greatly inspired by the whole-hearted cooperation extended to me by the agricultural labourers and farmers of the villages, which I have investigated and therefore owe gratitude to them.

My heartfelt thanks are also due to my friends and relatives, specially I owe to my wife Madhuri and my little son Tanmay, who have inspired and help me in various ways for the completion of this work.
