

Table of Contents

Chapter	Contents	Page
	Acknowledgement
	Preface	i - iv
Chapter I	Introduction	1- 17
Chapter II	Are all problems of philosophy linguistic in character ?
	Section 1: Introductory	18-19
	• 2: How does language matter to philosophy	19-26
	• 3: Theory of the world and of language	26-33
	• 4: A critical assessment of Ambrose's 'proposal theory of philosophy'	33-39
	• 5: Remarks	39-43
Chapter III	Does language require revision?
	Section 1: Introductory	44-49
	• 2: Why does language require revision?	49-55
	• 3: The nature of ideal language	55-56
	• 4: Frege on the ideal language	56-60
	• 5: Carnap on the ideal language	60-70
	• 6: Bergmann on the ideal language	70-72
	• 7: Russell on the ideal language	72-81
	• 8: Wittgenstein on the ideal language	81-89
	• 9: A review of the ideal language construction programme	89-96
	• 10: Remarks	96-98
Chapter IV	A Plea for Ordinary Language
	Section 1: Introductory	99
	• 2: The inadequacy of ideal language	100-115
	• 3: Historical background of the development of ordinary language	116-117
	• 4: Strawson on the ordinary language	117-124
	• 5: Austin on the ordinary language	124-131
	• 6: Wittgenstein on the ordinary language	131-143
Chapter V	Language and Ontology
	Section 1: Introductory	144-147
	• 2: Language and ontology: A note on Cornman	147-151
	• 3: Remarks	152-155
Chapter VI	Language and the human conceptual framework
	Section 1: Introductory	156-157
	• 2: A different outlook about the nature function of language: A note on Strawson	157-161

Table of Contents(contd.)

Chapter	Contents	Page
	Section 3: Different Steps of Strawson's argument	161-168
	• 4: Remarks	168-171
Chapter VII	Noam Chomsky on: Language as a mirror of human mind
	Section 1: Introductory	172
	• 2: Language and the human mind: A shift from epistemology to psychology	172-176
	• 3: Grammar, Creativity and Competence	176-179
	• 4: How is internalisation made possible?	179-184
	• 5: Nature and function of Acquisition Device(AD)	184-190
	• 6: Remarks	190-191
Chapter VIII	Concluding Remarks	192-205
	Selected Bibliography	206-235