To begin with, let me submit the fact that my interest in the study of the history of merger developed about a decade ago when I was doing my M. Phil. dissertation on the subject. Later, I was encouraged to take up doctoral research by various scholars like Prof. Jayanta B. Bhattacharya, Prof. Amalendu Guha, Prof. Suranjan Das, Prof. J.K. Roy Choudhury, Prof. P.K. Bhattacharya, Dr. A.G. Ghosh and Dr. Kamallesh Das. But for different reasons the interest never got translated into action. I had almost given up the idea when Dr. Dilip Kr. Sarkar, formerly senior faculty member of Presidency College, Calcutta, suggested that I apply for the U.S.C. minor research project-grants. Fortunately, I was awarded the grant by U.S.C. and here is the work I did for last three years. I am most grateful to Dr. Sarkar for this and to the U.S.C. for providing me necessary financial support.

This doctoral dissertation would not have been possible without the help of a lot of friends. Among them I have the pleasure of especially mentioning the help of Dr. A.G. Ghosh, Reader in History, North Bengal University. I am also indebted to some elderly persons living in Cooch Behar and in some other places who made my academic venture memorable and educative. I should express my gratitude to the following in particular: Late Hemanta Barman, Late Promedendra Narayan, Sri Monoranjan Guha, Sri Tarapada Chakraborty, Dr. Kripendra Nath Paul, for many instances of guidance and hospitality.

I must now express my gratitude to the staff of the Jawaharlal Nehru Museum and Library, New Delhi, National Archives, New Delhi, State Archives, Kolkata, Library of the Institute of Advanced Studies, Simla, National Library, Kolkata, Cooch Behar Collectorate Record Room, Cooch Behar, North Bengal State Library, Cooch Behar, Assam Sahitya Sabha, Assam, kamrup Anusandhan Samiti, Assam, Department of Historical and Antiquarian Studies, Assam, Guwahati University Library and North Bengal University Library. I also express my gratitude to all the authors whose valuable works I have utilised in giving shape to this dissertation.

I take this opportunity to express heartfelt gratitude to the faculty members of the Political Science Department, NBU and to my research supervisor, Dr. Dilip Kr. Sarkar, a former Reader of Presidency College, Kolkata and is at present the Controller of Examinations, University of North Bengal, for providing me intellectual support and valuable suggestions to understand the area of research both conceptually and operationally. I also express my gratitude to Mousumi Boudi (wife of my supervisor) for her hospitality and generosity.

I now thank my wife Elsa and our son Kushal for ungrudgingly facing the hard times, with or without me and making this effort a reality.

Biman Chakraborty.
