

This thesis has been prepared under the supervision of Dr. D.P.Sinha, Jadunath Adyapak and the Head of the Department of History, North Bengal University. He kept a constant and fruitful watch over my work. That I complete it, is largely due to his active interest in the matter. Dr. Tapas Kumar Roychoudhury, Lecturer in History, North Bengal University spared much of his time to elucidate certain difficult points connected with this thesis. Sree Pranab Ranjan Chakravarty, Lecturer in Geography, has kindly spent considerable time helping in the preparation of the first chapter. I also owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Jagadish Narayan Sarkar, formerly Professor and Head of the Department of History, Jadavpur University and Dr. K.K.Dutta, ex-Vice.Chancellor of Patna University for their useful suggestions and criticisms.

My thanks are also due to the University Grants Commission, for awarding me a Junior Research Fellowships for four years which enabled me to carry out my research.

The maps included in the thesis have been prepared by my scholar friends Miss Krishna Ghosh and Miss Mitra Ghosh, both of the Department of Geography, North Bengal University. I sincerely thank them.

I am also indebted to Sree Haraprasad Ghosh and Ajit Bhattacharya for their suggestions on improvements in language.

I would also like to convey my gratitude to my departmental teachers especially Dr. Pranab Kumar Bhattacharya and Sree Mihir Mohan Mukherjee whose constant encouragement has greatly helped me to complete the thesis.

Mr. Gautam Bhadra, M.Phil, now Associate Fellow of the Centre for Studies in Social Sciences has kindly permitted me to use his M.Phil thesis. I have received all sorts of assistance from the local people of Malda during my field study there. My sincerest thanks are due to the staff of National Library, Secretariat Library, West Bengal; Library of the Asiatic Society, Cal.; Malda Collectorat<sup>e</sup>s Library and the State Archives, Calcutta; the National Archives, New Delhi; and the North Bengal University library, from which I have collected my materials. My beloved cousin Monoranjan Ghosh has constantly encouraged me to complete the thesis. All of them can well claim a share in all the qualities which the dissertation has. The responsibility of any omission and commission is entirely mine.
