

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Initially, Sikkim, a tiny Kingdom of the Eastern Himalaya in the lap of Mount Khang-chen-dzonga (Guardian deity of Sikkim), a British Protectorate, an Indian Protectorate, an associate State of India, finally became the 22nd State of India since 1975. This transition period from monarchy to democracy exhibits Sikkim as one of the States of India based on the struggle of the Political Parties of Sikkim, their Political leaders and the People of Sikkim. In this research work, an attempt is being made with sincerity to highlight the transformation from monarchy to democracy and the existing Political system in its structural and functional aspects along with the Political changes of Sikkim.

At the very outset, I must thank to the University of North Bengal for having been given to me an opportunity to register myself for pursuing PhD Degree Programme. Very truly, I am highly obliged to my Supervisor Dr. Manas Chakrabarty, Professor, Department of Political Science, University of North Bengal for his Scholarly guidance and supervision so as to give its final shape for submission of this thesis to the University. I am unable here to find out words to thank him amply.

I am indebted to the Government of Sikkim, particularly, Dr. Pawan Chamling, Hon'ble Chief Minister of Sikkim, without whose blessings I would not have got this opportunity of doing my research work. Words are not adequate to thank him.

It is my prime duty to make a special mention to my beloved teacher Dr. K. R. Chakaravarthi, Principal, Government College, Rhenock, East Sikkim, for providing me not only materials, but also encouraging me with his invaluable suggestions, guidance and experiences so as to enable me to complete this work ahead of time very successfully.

I also take an opportunity to express my inner felt gratitude to all those personalities (please see Appendix XII for details) who had spared their valuable time despite of their busy schedule for taking interviews with them based on a set of unstructured Questionnaire administered to them to answer. Without their moral support and experiences, this work would not have come to this stage. In particular, I would like to thank to Shri Garjaman Gurung, Hon'ble Minister for Human Resource Development Department and Cultural Heritage Department and through him all officers concerned of Human Resource Development Department, Government of Sikkim, Shri B. B. Goroong and Shri S. M.
