Acknowledgements

Quite impulsively, I made an appointment and went to Kolkata to meet the legendary comic-book artist Narayan Debnath nine years ago. Coming back, when I disclosed the idea of writing an essay on Batul the Great to Sumana Roy—one of my favourite scholar-poets today—she expressed a lot of enthusiasm and suggested that I could write my dissertation on superhero comics. I am extremely indebted to her for igniting the fire in me to work in this area. I had my doubts, and yet I jumped into the river without knowing how to swim. But what appears to be a crucial mistake often has the power to push us towards an adventure into an unknown and uncomfortable territory and explore its limits. When you know that you have made a mistake and reached to a blind alley from where you cannot return, it pushes you to open new avenues of critical thinking. In fact, it took at least a couple years, if not more, for me to realize it and when it has finally been done, thanks goes to my supervisor Dr. Ranjan Ghosh who, as I always say, has taught me how to think. Without his critical inputs and guidance this dissertation would not have been possible. Thanks also go to my childhood hero, my cousin Shyamal Misra, who taught me the English alphabet. It is impossible to mention all but the scholars who have sent me their books and papers also owe my gratitude. My special thanks go to Peter Coogan for sending me a copy of his seminal but now out-of-print book Superhero: The Secret Origin of a Genre. Arnab

Dutta always inspired me, remained by my side in bad times, and provided books whenever I needed one. He is no more but every page I have written is marked by his memory. The anonymous reviewer of the journal Sanglap: Journal of Literary and Cultural Inquiry which has published a part of my introductory chapter needs to be thanked for providing some interesting insights. It's a blessing for a researcher if one of his two brothers is a librarian. I had easy access to whatever book or journal I needed due to Ajay Misra. Abhijit Misra, the elder brother, has always remained by my side and inspired me in this long journey. I have lost my father long ago, but it was he who made me what I am today. My mother will be the happiest person on earth to see this and I could not even have done this work without her love and care. My father-in-law had always been there with his love, support, mathematical thinking, and a vast reservoir of stories. Surojit had solutions to everything. For all kinds of technical support, he was only a phone call away. And finally, my wife—Suv—who stayed strong and lent me support as a pillar with her enormous love, gigantic care and inexorable smile in all times, good or the worst.
