

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I express my profound sense of gratitude to my supervisor, Prof. Gangotri Chakraborty, Department of law, University of North Bengal, for giving her valuable time while going through each and every page of my thesis with meticulous care and intense thought. This work is immensely influenced and enriched by her scholarly advice and critical analysis. She has been a constant source of inspiration behind this work from the very beginning. It has been a memorable and pleasant experience to work under such a phenomenal and dynamic scholar and above all, a great human being.

I acknowledge my respect to Prof. Bishnu Prasad Dwivedi, Department of Law, University of North Bengal, for his kind support and suggestions. He has provided me with several relevant information that I have incorporated in my work.

I also express my gratitude for Dr. Rathin Bandopadhyay, Department of Law, University of North Bengal for encouragement and inspiration throughout the working period.

I want to thank Dr. Sujit Kumar Biswas, Department of Law, University of North Bengal, for his wholehearted assistance in this work. I also express my deep appreciation for Sri Diganta Biswas for having stood by me during the stressful period of this research. My gratitude for all the staff of the library, National University of Juridical Science, Indian Institute of Law, Department of Law, University of North Bengal and Jalpaiguri Law College.

I owe my sense of gratefulness to my mother, my brother, Prasenjeet Bhattacharjee for their continuous support and encouragement. I offer my special thanks to my wife, Mou, for her love and support. I also want to thank my students especially, Ripon Bhattacharjee and Avijit Chakraborty.
