

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I take this opportunity to express my sincere indebtedness to Prof.(Dr.) K. B. Datta, D.Sc., Centre for Life Sciences, North Bengal University, under whose supervision this dissertation has been prepared. Besides providing laboratory facilities, his total involvement in discussion and critical examination of the manuscript are duly acknowledged with deep sense of gratitude.

I express my sincere gratitude to Prof. P. K. Basu, Prof. A. K. Chakraborty, and Prof. E. C. Pal, senior teachers of the Centre for Life Sciences, but for whose kind cooperation, advice and guidance this study would not have been completed.

I am also obliged to Dr. (Mrs.) S. Swarup Mitra, M.M.B.S., Ph.D., M.A.M.S., Dy. Director, ICMR, Haematology Unit, School of Tropical Medicine, Calcutta, for encouragement and guidance during enzyme G6PD Study and to Dr. Rudra N. Agarwala, Ph.D., of our laboratory for guidance during the early part of the study.

Those who are associated with different health centres and hospitals and other people, who have generously extended their help and donated blood as samples are thankfully acknowledged. Similarly, M/S. Chempure (Pvt.) Ltd., Calcutta, cannot be ignored for their timely despatching of many valuable chemicals.

I owe heartiest thanks to Mr. Bharat Rai, SRF, Centre for Life Sciences and Mr. Dhan B. Khawas, SRF, Department of Chemistry, North Bengal University, for friendly help and encouragement in many ways.

I am also thankful to the Government of West Bengal and to the Department of Science & Technology and Environment, Government of India, for financial assistance.

I should also appreciate the cooperation extended by my fellow mates like Krishna Ghatani, Harka Chhetri, Rabin Chhetri, Diwakar Pradhan, Lalit Rai, and Deepak Sengupta. And my thanks to Sri A. K. Bose for typing the manuscript.

I should like to extend my thanks to the teaching and non-teaching members of the Centre for Life Sciences, North Bengal University, for their ungrudging cooperation. Similarly, I am obliged to my departmental colleagues, notably Dr. (Mrs.) J. K. Sharma, Mr. Jyoti P. Tamang and Miss Sushma Tamang of Sikkim Government College, Sikkim, for their warm cooperation and to Sri P. Tamang, Department of Physics, North Bengal University, for looking after the instruments and other valuable suggestions.

Indeed I am privileged by the inspiration and encouragement showered by family members, particularly my parents, Sri Tej B. Chhetri and Smt. Ganga M. Chhetri, who were always by my side during difficult and depressing days and to my uncle Dambar B. Chhetri and brother Amber B. Chhetri, for their whole-hearted interest and affection.

Rabindra Chhetri
(Rabindra Chhetri) 3/4/89